Why is battery production important for the EU?

Batteries, widely used in the transport and energy sectors, are central to the global energy system. They will be key to the EU's clean energy transition, industrial future and strategic autonomy. Boosting the industrial base for battery production is therefore a key task for the EU.

Will batteries be able to meet energy demand in the EU?

As regards batteries for stationary energy storage in the EU (for energy grid or home storage), despite steady growth, their roll-out should accelerate to meet the forecast demand of 200 gigawatts (GW) by 2030. A total of 30 gigafactory projects had been announced, with the potential to achieve a combined capacity of 1.3 TWh by 2030.

How much money is invested in EV batteries in 2023?

This has resulted in investment in batteries and critical minerals refining more than tripling, with battery manufacturing investment reaching US$40.9 billion. Since 2018, global investment in EV batteries and in battery storage has increased eightfold and fivefold, respectively, reaching a total of US$150 billion in 2023.

Is battery storage a risky investment?

Firstly, the nascent nature of energy storage technology means that fixed income lenders and senior debt providers are naturally risk averse. Battery storage has less of a track record than other renewable energy assets such as solar and wind power.

How big is Europe's battery manufacturing capacity in 2023?

Additionally, Europe's total installed battery manufacturing capacity had reached 167 GWh in 2023 (capacity utilisation rates of battery plants are not 100 %). Source: European Commission, Dashboard towards zero-emission vehicles, April 2024.

How does the EU operate in the battery sector?

The EU has long recognised batteries as a strategic technology. The EU operates in the battery sector primarily in three ways. Firstly, by providing strategic impetus within the sector, using its convening power to improve cooperation among stakeholders and define an EU industrial strategy.
